Welcome to the London Symphony Orchestra's 2013/14 concert season

2012 has been a special year with many unforgettable memories: the LSO appearing at every major summer festival in Europe, as well as in both the opening and closing ceremonies of London 2012. At the Olympics we were delighted to be able to include pupils from East London who have been part of LSO On Track since 2008, and to share the stage with them at the first-ever outdoor BMW LSO Open Air Classics concert in Trafalgar Square, playing Stravinsky with Valery Gergiev to well over 10,000 people there last May.

We celebrated 100 years of US touring, the LSO being the first British orchestra there, and the 80th anniversary of Abbey Road Studios, where the LSO made the inaugural recording with Elgar, followed by hundreds of memorable recordings and film soundtracks including Star Wars and a number of the Harry Potter films.

The Orchestra also celebrated its 30th season as Resident Orchestra at the Barbican. Having a home in one of the world's leading arts centres has enabled the LSO to expand its programming, attract the finest artists and build loyal audiences. As partners in the City's educational cultural quarter of the Guildhall School, the Barbican, and LSO St Luke's, all within ten minutes' walk of each other, the LSO has been able to invest in future musical talent – the lifeblood of our own music-making – and in connecting with the broadest mix of people from our local community.

It is with great pleasure that I announce the 2013/14 season to you, our most loyal supporters, first.

Kathryn McDowell
Managing Director

Valery Gergiev 2013/14 – Berlioz and Scriabin

Valery Gergiev is a long-time Berlioz champion, conducting it internationally with the Vienna Philharmonic and with the Mariinsky Orchestra, and next autumn he will share his interpretations with London audiences, catching the anarchic undercurrents of Berlioz's scores as surely as its rapturous refinements. Scriabin was nothing if not too ambitious, and Gergiev presents his complete orchestral works (all five of them) over three concerts in March 2014. The LSO gave the first UK performance of Scriabin's 'Poem of Ecstasy' in 1910, and Elgar was so shocked when he heard it a decade later he wrote: 'To think that Gloucester Cathedral should echo to such music. It's a wonder the gargoyles don't fall off the tower'.

11 concerts conducted by Valery Gergiev:
31 Oct; 1, 3, 6, 7, 12, 13 & 14 Nov 2013
30 Mar; 10 & 13 Apr 2014

UBS Soundscapes: LSO Artist Portrait – Yuja Wang

Yuja Wang is a questing pianist who knows her own mind. Introduced to the LSO by Michael Tilson Thomas in 2009, she has also toured with the Orchestra to Spain and Germany. Her musical roots are 'playing the piano really naturally because everything I heard from the beginning was through music. I studied with only one teacher from the age of seven to 14. She was Russian-taught and talked a lot about sound. She really loved Kissin, so I heard all his Chopin recordings when I was nine. She also liked Argerich, and I liked Cortot; I found him extremely poetic and very inspiring'. At 25, Yuja Wang reached a landmark year in 2012 making her debuts at the BBC Proms, the Tanglewood Festival and at Carnegie Hall.

3 concerts with the LSO and Yuja Wang:
9, 13 & 20 Feb 2014

Yuja Wang Solo Piano Recital:

Music alchemists: journeys with great conductors

So what do great conductors do? The answer is to be found in those 'cosmic' performances, where, in a truly alchemical transformation of elements, something is achieved that goes beyond the egos of the players or the conductors, and the only choice is to follow the musical energy that's being created on stage. The last thing great conductors do is to force musicians to do their bidding. Performances are constructed through patient hours of listening, so that each player has the chance to build up a similar mental, musical and emotional map of the piece. Then listening expands to include the audience, too, so that live concerts aren't simply letting a musical experience happen to you, but you are an active, essential part of it. Here are ten of the best.

10 concerts conducted by:
Bernard Haitink 10 & 15 Oct 2013
Michael Tilson Thomas 12 & 19 Dec 2013
Sir John Eliot Gardiner 21 Jan, 23 Mar 2014
Sir Mark Elder 4 & 8 May, 12 Jun 2014
Sir Simon Rattle 1 Jun 2014

Singing Sundays

This series does exactly what it says on the tin: six Sundays spent listening to great choruses and choral masterpieces. Simon Halsey, the dynamic new Choral Director of the LSO and the London Symphony Chorus, will also be your guide in two singing days so you can participate too, if you want to. Simon has an impressive choral pedigree. He is Chief Conductor of the Berlin Radio Choir, he has been Chorus Director of the CBSO Chorus for over 25 years, and he also holds the positions of Artistic Director of the Berlin Philharmonic's Youth Choral Programme and Director of the BBC Proms Youth Choir.

The LSO invites …

Over the next three years the LSO is inviting a panoply of conductors to the podium to guest conduct them in repertoire synonymous with the Orchestra. The line-up includes established conductors new to the LSO but not to London, such as Daniele Gatti, Thomas Dausgaard and Jonathan Nott, two conductors well-known to the Orchestra as violinists, Leonidas Kavakos and Nikolaj Znaider, plus James Gaffigan and Jaap van Zweden.

9 concerts with 8 new faces:
Thomas Dausgaard 25 Sep 2013
Jaap van Zweden 9 Feb 2014
James Gaffigan 13 Feb 2014
Daniele Gatti 27 Apr 2014
Nikolaj Znaider 1 May 2014
Leonidas Kavakos 6 Jun 2014
Fabio Luisi 19 & 22 Jun 2014
Jonathan Nott 29 Jun 2014

Sounds British

From its early days the London Symphony Orchestra played with the leading lights of British music, and premiered their works. Elgar, Walton and Britten are three of the big name composers played this season along with two world premieres: Huw Watkins' Flute Concerto and Peter Maxwell Davies' Tenth Symphony. But did you know that one Polish composer, a naturalised Brit, also inspired composing workshops and new commissions for the next generation now called the Panufnik Scheme, or that there are six LSO Soundhub composers working regularly at LSO St Luke's?

6 concerts featuring Brits:
Britten 29 Sep 2013
Walton 30 Jan 2014
Elgar and Maxwell Davies (world premiere) 2 Feb 2014
Panufnik 5 Feb 2014
Huw Watkins (world premiere) 23 Feb 2014
